

Little White School MUSEUM

Step in and Take a Step Back in Time

The Little White School Museum, located right outside downtown Oswego holds the rich history of the community and reflects the spirit of its early residents. Built as a church in 1850, then used as a school until the mid 1960's, the building is now a community museum open to the public and an archive of local Oswegoland history.

The Oswegoland Park District operates the museum in partnership with the Oswegoland Heritage Association.
